

CARING MORE THAN WAS THOUGHT POSSIBLE

CREECH IN ACTION

During a time of uncertainty its a wonderful thing to have a ray of hope to weather the storms ahead. The 432nd and 25 ATKS chapel team have been in full effect to shine through obscurity and promote a brighter tomorrow.

However with the help of psychiatrists at The VA we have been able incorporate the science of understanding of PTSD and Moral Injury to better tailor our art of spiritual uplift with clinically effective methods.

For our team creating a beacon means innovation to tough problems our airman face. Leading us to conduct drive through confessions, supper super heroes, backyard mass and online relationship check-ups.

Every RST has played a crucial role in maintaining a felt presence while continuing to uphold social distancing. Participating in virtual commanders calls, visiting every accessible work space and creating an wing discord server for community engagement and personal development.

With the current climate maintaining good relationships can be seen as an art not just a science. Crafting online marriage tune up webinars, family scavenger hunts and evoking the courage for others to participate in online karaoke, are just some of the way that Creech & Shaw are helping our Airman's Spiritual pillar sing a song of relief.

Even in our darkest hour, resulting from one of wing members taking their life. Our chapel team created opportunities for solace, for those left to grief. With a memorial service and prayer upon a mountain top.
